

Universal Dynamics

By

My Gift to the world

The basis for this writing, is to draw a line through most areas of physics. Its purpose is to advance, promote, expand as many understandings, of the Universe, from my perspective. I took into consideration the Theories of Newton, Einstein, Darwin, and Nash. I'm trying to build a complete understanding of the structural workings, by combining All information, and prove in a overall proof, that Balance is the ultimate outcome of all existence. That what we are experiencing is energy exchange. That, we are a product of energy currents, that defines all of our perceivable reality experiences.

Since all matter in the universe is created, or sustained in motion, and motion is energy created by a instability of negative space time creating positive force. We must conclude all things are energy. Motion is energy. All energy visible to us or not is light frequency properties. Therefore all matter is a form of light frequency bands somewhere in the light spectrum range. The mass of energy, and the masses of space pull positive force, and push positive energy into the shapes you see. It's not hard to understand that on some level the energy of motion is being condensed into matter. They know anti matter is condensed negative energy therefore positive frequency light positive energy condensed creates form and mass as well. The endless variations of matter can be contributed to the variations in the energy light spectrum, the variables are seemingly endless. From total negative light to total positive light frequencies these frequencies are what make all matter. I know this because any force that protrudes, or is able to extrapolate outward is a positive in a negative. The sun can only exchange its energy if it expelled its mass from a positive into a negative realm. The sun is losing mass because of its energy exchange and that is only possible if a positive depletes its energy into a negative realm. Now all positive force is created through the instability of space motion creating a positive force, think of stars as sparks of energy in a fabric sheet when you create friction it sparks this is space time. Due to mass force offsets matter forms straight out of the negative fabric through positive force. The universe is a disc if the laws of all the motion of its greatest masses is an indication of that, such as planet rotation, solar system rotation, galaxy rotation, and almost positive it has a dense core which anchors all mass as it spins. I don't think the universe will collapse due to mass ratios, I think the design of the universe was ultimately to become balanced. Balance is the key to all sustainability and viability of all creation. We are living in a semi static field like what you see on tv, light and dark, negative and positive forces bouncing around and all around each other, but at some point it settles down and melds into a stable creation of balanced energy. The keys to life are balance. Gravity is all mass spiralling in on itself due to mass weight, all mass fall back in on itself and spins inward around the negative spinning force of negative space pi spiral helix the key to gravity and matter formation spiraling in and out due to mass offsets. The singularity is a point where all things begin and end at the same spot, it's at the point where the other realms can be reached because it's where mass is gained and lost. I believe there are 14 basic dimensions to the structure of the universe, 7 of positive light matter Time formation and 7 of the negative space fabric Time. If you fit pi of all mass into a square you can calculate six sides and a seventh dimension inside. This is true for positive matter time, and also negative space time, (two time factors, time dilation offset), both residing in the same spots at the same time, this is why the mind can take on negativity or become positive. I believe there are two of us at the same spot that merge, the more negative we are the faster we break down as a positive being, the more positive we are the more in line we are with our core creation. Although both positive and negative forces in too much of a degree will lead to destruction this is why a balance of both forces is imperative to long term survival. Now the expansion of energy through a negative realm is time. The flow at which positive goes to negative pole is the rate of your reality! :-)

Energy light is both particle for structure under mass gravity and wave properties when observed or broken up and energized. Energy is particle under motion gravity mass, and is also wave frequency for visual understanding. The reason there's quanta is frequency bands every frequency has its location in space all frequency is connected as a whole because the universe is a unit body not separated as you observe in the resistance area realm of larger bodies, the closer you get to its source of energy the more you see it's actually a whole one energy matter dynamic with laws governing its frequency order, and negative frequency is the same. As they get mass it creates more resistance from the whole energy field making it more stable reality and more observable or rational to a mind because a time factor is involved with its expansion and motion governed by its gravity, mass, that is separated slightly from its energy whole through density of energy created by mass, resistance, and it stabilizes its quanta state through gravity mass. The closer you get to the whole the more it is able to bypass physics because all physics is governed by mass gravity effects. The universe is a wave length property, divided by mass, created through motion, form particle mass from frequency based existence. Energy is both frequency and particle, and it is very much a consciousness on the whole also some what less but more independent consciousness with resistance of mass. All matter is nothing more then condensed frequency energy mass from the whole of a unified energy field dynamic. Is it so hard to imagine that it is an order filled frequency mass, subdivided by motion energy condensed, which oscillate from negative to positive poles through a stable mass body order governed by the laws of gravity. The closer it get to the whole of the structure of its core existence the more unstable it seems because the laws of physics don't apply to that which does not has mass, from gravity. It is a state of whole rather than a state governed and subdivided by motion, mass condensed gravity

The forward expansion of energy is Time, as we know it. The flow rate of energy from positive state to negative state is the rate of your reality.

All energy is consciousness

Two time factors one for positive light frequency time matter, and one for negative space time. The Two make it possible for reality motion variables for without two time sets things would only run in a solid forward or backwards state. With two time factors it allows for variable, anomalies, variations. A solid time singular time set, becomes a fixed time set not allowing for energy oscillation, a one state reality realm does exist, a three time factor reality does exist i'm sure of that. We live in a oscillating two time set. Where negative force time, allows positive force time to occupy time dimensions in and around each other, allowing for expansion, contraction, oscillation of the energy current flow giving way to a divisional factor of time assignment. Time can expand forward in motion, or reverse in motion. It just so happens that the positive energy force being created in this universe is greater than the reversal negative time effect of negative space time draw. Positive force being created in this universe, the forward positive time matter force is being pushed inward and outward either seen like a spiral helix outward and inward flows or a cone to cone flow as seen in my diagram. I believe time seems like it's always flowing forward because new energy creation makes it seem like it's always moving forward. When in fact time expands outward to full mass existence then degrades back to a negative state collapsing back to its singularity, then expands back out again, this is why I believe the universes full dynamic is a spiral pi helix in and out flow. I think it's spinning its winding up inward energy, stores it, then expels it slowly back out by creating positive matter formations created by tension of positive force falling in on itself because it's being condensed into spiral pi helix, then as it degrades it spiral pi helixes outward, in and out motion of pi helix due to mass lost and gained through the singularity point. Where current exchange is anchored, and flows in and out of reality through mass weight offset current exchange. The forward motion or state of matter is energy expansion time sets, the contraction of energy in the negative states of matter degradation is a negative time set. As it flows its mass determines its time flow. In and out time flows, positive and negative time sets. Reality is possible because one has a positive time set factor and one a negative this can be seen in nature a positive form would be the point at which something begins, a negative time set would be the slow progression of its mass collapsing in on itself, exchanging positive states of matter to a negative time state. The current flow of the universe is pi, its motion is inward outward helix spiral to point of singularity on both extremes two cones at one point positive, it spirals outward to full expansion, then inward to a slow spiral of negative degradation of time, until it hits a singularity point at its end and begins again pi spiral helix cones I believe is the structure within a 6 sided cube matrix reality.

Energy of all kinds is both particle for structure under mass gravity and wave properties when observed or broken up and energized. Energy is particle under motion gravity mass, and is also wave frequency for visual understanding. The reason there's quanta is frequency bands every frequency has its location in space all frequency is connected as a whole because the universe is a unit body not separated as you observe in the resistance area realm of larger bodies, the closer you get to its source of energy the more you see it's actually a whole one energy matter dynamic with laws governing its frequency order, and negative frequency is the same. As they get mass it creates more resistance from the whole energy field making it more stable reality and more observable or rational to a mind because a time factor is involved with its expansion and motion governed by its gravity, mass, that is separated slightly from its energy whole through density of energy created by mass, resistance, and it stabilizes its quanta state through gravity mass. The closer you get to the whole the more it is able to bypass physics because all physics is governed by mass gravity effects. The universe is a wave length property, divided by mass, created through motion, form particle mass from frequency based existence. Energy is both frequency and particle, and it is very much a consciousness on the whole also some what less but more independent consciousness with resistance of mass. All matter is nothing more then condensed frequency energy mass from the whole of a unified energy field dynamic. Is it so hard to imagine that it is an order filled frequency mass, subdivided by motion energy condensed, which oscillate from negative to positive poles through a stable mass body order governed by the laws of gravity. The closer it get to the whole of the structure of its core existence the more unstable it seems because the laws of physics don't apply to that which does not has mass, from gravity. It is a state of whole rather than a state governed and subdivided by motion, mass condensed gravity